- Desktop Environment : i3
- Distribution : Fedora
- i3wm Website : <https://i3wm.org>
- Fedora website: <https://fedoraproject.org>

Opinion:

I chose i3 as the window manager / desktop environment for the simple fact that Linux systems are based on the philosophy that everything is a file, therefore the environment should be maximally serving the goal of file editing. It is lightweight, able to be heavily customized, and geared towards managing tasks efficiently instead of having stacked windows, which may be a source of distraction since less important tasks may be lost behind other windows. I chose Fedora because I am already using Fedora KDE, am familiar with the dnf ecosystem, and Fedora offers an i3 spin of their distribution. I do not mind configuring my desktop environment, which may be a point of friction for other users that want a classic desktop experience.
